

Mosque Set on Fire in Bombing Suspect's Hometown

A mosque in Corvallis, Oregon, was set on fire Sunday night. This came two days after a young Muslim man from the town was arrested and charged with planning a bombing.

The fire at the Salman Al-Farisi Islamic Center started sometime after midnight. The building's office was damaged.

There is a reward up to $10,000 for information on who was responsible.

The FBI says it will not tolerate anyone trying to strike back at Muslims.
