

Not a Victim

Desima James told the Federal Emergency Management Agency that he was a victim of disasters in five different States. Now, he admits he was lying.

James pleaded guilty on Monday. The court found that he got over $30,000 by making fake claims to FEMA. He said he lived in areas that had been hit by hurricanes, flooding, and a tornado. James gave different names and addresses in Texas, Louisiana, Florida, Indiana, and New Hampshire. He really lived in Georgia.

FEMA mailed him money to help with his "emergencies".

"Mr. James exploited other people's misfortune in hopes of being delivered a life of ease," says the Postal Inspector in charge of Atlanta, Georgia.
